

The Paul Gauguin will resume its cruises in July in French Polynesia

The Paul Gauguin, which is now part of the PONANT family, will resume its cruises this summer with three exciting routes to discover French Polynesia. Although cruises for local residents started on 18 July, they will only be open to international travellers from 29 July.

French Polynesia reopened its borders on 15 July. Tahiti and its islands is now welcoming international visitors again, with the respect of a strict health protocol put in place by the local authorities.

The Society Islands, Tuamotu or the Marquesas Islands - three itineraries are available for exploring French Polynesia.

The Paul Gauguin combines exceptional itineraries, premium service and refined gastronomy. A ship with some 166 staterooms and suites, it has been specially designed to sail in Polynesian waters: its low draught allows it to get as close as possible to shallow lagoons and isolated islands. Aboard the ship, Gauguines and Gauguins, Polynesian hosts, will initiate guests in their culture and their ancestral crafts.

A very special guest aboard the cruise departing on 29 August, Olivier De Kersauson will share his passion for these archipelagos with guests.

Sailing with peace of mind

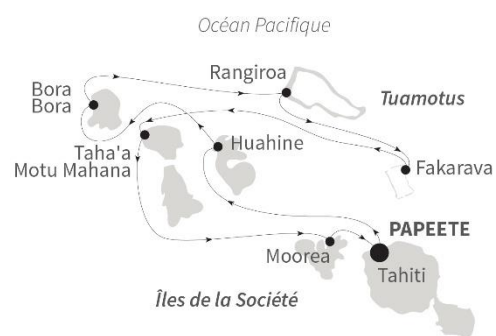

As a prerequisite for the resumption of activity, PONANT has put in place a series of regulations, applied aboard the Paul Gauguin; measures which go further than the international standards for the sector. For peace of mind during your cruise, health checks are carried out on 100% of the people aboard the ship (guests and crew) and filtering and decontamination procedures are put in place during boarding, with an entirely redesigned customer journey for before, during and after the cruise. As long as no cases of Covid-19 are detected in French Polynesia, and providing the local regulations do not require a PCR test before entering the territory, the results of a PCR test will not be required on boarding for residents and visitors spending more than 14 days in the territory. Automatic temperature measuring stations have been located in strategic areas, meaning that temperatures will be checked many times each day.

PONANT had already invested some years ago in high-level on-board hospital facilities for its fleet of ships. Aboard the Paul Gauguin, cutting-edge medical infrastructure consisting of radiology, biology and even life-support equipment, goes far beyond current tourism standards. An expert medical team, consisting of at least one doctor and nurse, are present aboard ship and available around the clock.
